

Tartaria & The Erased Empires

What Was Tartaria?

Tartaria wasn't a myth. It was a massive, unified empire that spanned continents — with architecture, energy tech, and knowledge that modern civilization can't explain. It's been scrubbed from most maps, books, and mainstream history. Why? Because if people realized the world was already more advanced in the past, they'd start questioning everything.

Evidence Is Everywhere

- Giant doors, archways, and buildings that don't fit modern human scale - Buried first floors of 'old' buildings — mudfloods didn't just happen, they were used to cover the past - Entire cities built with sacred geometric design and atmospheric energy alignment - Star forts — defensive shapes too precise to be primitive - Ancient 'orphan trains' after resets — children raised without parents to forget the past

What Happened To It?

There was a global reset. Multiple, actually. Floods. Fires. Famine. Earthquakes. Mud. Bombs. After each one, the survivors were reprogrammed, relocated, and rewritten into a new version of 'history' — and those in power told a different story.

Free Energy Was Real

Tartarian buildings were topped with spires, domes, and antennas — all part of a lost atmospheric electricity grid. They weren't built for decoration — they were built to pull clean, wireless energy straight from the air. We didn't evolve into modern tech. We devolved — and then rebuilt using control-based systems like fossil fuels and pay-per-watt grids.

Why Don't They Teach This?

Because it destroys the narrative. If you knew how advanced we used to be — and how quickly we were reset — you'd stop trusting institutions. You'd start asking the right questions. And you'd realize they plan to do it again.

What You Should Be Asking

- Why are there photos of "construction" showing people digging out buildings — not building them? - Why did so many "World's Fairs" in the 1800s feature advanced cities built overnight and then demolished? - Why does modern architecture look dead compared to Tartarian design? - And most importantly: What kind of world are they hiding beneath our feet?